In the NATO deputies' discussion of 16 July, the Netherlands and Portugal supported the Norwegian position against the admission of Greece and Turkey to NATO. The Netherlands pointed out that to admit Greece and Turkey would be to lose the homogeneity of the present regional group in NATO and to change it into a purely military		Approved Fo r Release 2003/10/22 : CIA-RDP79T00975A00030 0200001-5 integration in any field unless the US constantly participated as the "honest broker." The Dutch Minister remains "very skeptical" of the Army's success and the sincerity of present German cooperation. Comment: The views of the Italian representative go beyond those expressed at the European Army Conference, and its opposition stems from dislike and distrust of French leadership on the continent and, to a lesser extent, the fear of a rebirth of German power. The French have recently shown new enthusiasm for their original proposal for a European Army, which was designed to avoid the re-establishment of a German national army and particularly of the German General Staff. The Germans appear willing to accept the European Army idea, once German donditions chiefly in regard to size of units are met. The Italians support the French proposal in principle, only if the implementation of the European force does not delay Western defense. The UK remains cool to the European Army concept, but probably will accept a compromise of the proposals recently made at the Petersberg and Paris talks. In the event of UK approval and adherence to the concept of a European Army as well as more evident US interest to counterbalance France and Germany, the Dutch will be more ready to participate in the discussions for organizing the Army. General Eisenhower believes that the solution of the problem of European defense is impossible until the German problem is solved, and states that the time has come to press for immediate action. Portugal, Belgium and the Netherlands agreed with other NATO countries on the military necessity for using Greek and Turkish troops in the Mediterranean, but reiterated their suggestion for a regional alliance tied to NATO through "reciprocal obligations," in effect through a military liaison.

Comment: The crux of the difficulty is the requirement for unanimous NATO agreement on the admission of new members. The small NATO countries are heartened in their opposition by the reluctant attitude of France, whose final decision awaits the formation of a government. The UK's agreement with the US position probably can serve as the opening wedge to achieve favorable action on the admission of Greece and Turkey.

4. Comment on the assassination of King Abdullah:

The assassination of King Abdullah of Jordan by a terrorist reportedly in contact with the former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem removes a resolutely anti-Communist, pro-Western ruler from the Arab world. The end of Abdullah's influence will most immediately and directly affect the British, who rely on the British-trained, officered, and financed Arab Legion (the army of Jordan) as the only competent and dependable Arab army in the Near East. The confusion and possible disorders which may result can only benefit the anti-Western elements in the Near East.

The sixty-nine year old king had many enemies both in the neighboring Arab states and in Jordan. Distrust and resentment of him stemmed from his apparent willingness to try to sign a treaty with Israel and from his sporadic attempts, in conjunction with his nephew, the Regent of Iraq, to establish a Greater Syria, consisting of Jordan, Iraq, and Syria.

The former Mufti, currently in Lebanon, is strongly anti-British. He had attempted to set up an independent Arab government in Palestine after the creation of Israel and has violently opposed the incorporation of the major part of Arab Palestine into Jordan.

Riad al-Solh, the former Prime Minister of Lebanon who was assassinated in Amman on 16 July, was a contributor to the former Mufti's funds. Unconfirmed rumors that a carload of Lebanse gunmen had been stopped at the Syrian border on their way to Jordan to avenge the death of Solh suggest the additional possibility of a connection between the two assassinations.

Prince Naif, the king's second son, has been named temporary regent. Abdullah's eldest son Tallal, the heir apparent, is currently undergoing treatment in a mental institution in Switzerland. Under the terms of the constitution Tallal's mental condition precludes his becoming monarch, and his fifteen year old son Hussein accordingly is the legal successor.
